Love of France shared on web

BULIMBA couple Sharon and David Stratford are sharing their love of France by launching their website just in time for Bastille Day this Friday.

Devoted Francophiles, Sharon and David have spent almost a year in France, spread over numerous trips, beginning with their first 10 years ago.

They have even bought a house in a village in the southwest of France to give them a permanent link to the country they adore.

Sharon said there was a whole range of attractions that kept enticing the couple back.

"David loves to interact with the locals, while for me it's the food and the architecture," she said.

They have set up a website to share their experiences of France with others who also desire things French.

Their site provides information on places to see, stay and eat in France as well as details about their recent property search and purchase.

To keep people updated they have a bimonthly newsletter that can be emailed to other lovers of France. Visit www.frenchdesire.com.
